

Photo courtesy of Firenze Convention Bureau

International Emergency Department Leadership Institute

October 25-29, 2010

Florence, Italy

As the number of interdisciplinary emergency departments grows internationally, where can ED leaders acquire the administrative skills they need to build and sustain successful emergency departments?

The International Emergency Department Leadership Institute (IEDLI) was created by Harvard Medical School faculty and other international experts in order to provide ED leaders with the skills and knowledge they need to successfully operate emergency departments in any part of the world.

In this one-week course consisting of over 35 hours of interactive lectures and workshops, leaders will explore strategies to:

- Establish the ED's role within the hospital
- Improve efficiency and control costs
- Decrease overcrowding
- Develop quality improvement programs
- Educate and motivate ED doctors and nurses
- Develop an emergency medicine training program
- Form a strong administrative structure

This program is designed for doctors, nurses and administrators.

For program details and registration:
www.IEDLI.org

Early registration discounts end July 1!

2010 faculty includes

Ron Walls, MD, FRCPC

Faculty, Harvard Medical School

Chairman, Dept. EM, Brigham and Women's Hospital

Andrew Schenkel, PhD

Assistant Professor,

Stockholm School of Economics

Richard Wolfe, MD

Faculty, Harvard Medical School

Chief of Emergency Medicine, BIDMC

Inger Søndergaard, MD

Director, Emergency Department

Herlev Hospital, Denmark

Graduate Program - October 28-29
for IEDLI alumni

The International Emergency Department Leadership Institute is a collaboration between Harvard Medical Faculty Physicians at BIDMC and Brigham and Women's Hospital.